

Content & Audience

My peers understood what my site was trying to do and the problem it solves, and they said it was clear who the target users were. They mentioned that the demo and descriptions made the purpose easy to understand, so it seems like the audience and goals came across well.

Design

For design, people said the layout looked clean, and the organization made sense. They liked how the pages flowed and thought the visuals worked well. The only real suggestion was that my footer font seemed a bit too large compared to the rest of the text.

Development

Everyone really liked the interactive parts, especially the garden planting feature with drag-and-drop. They thought the site felt advanced and worked smoothly, and no one pointed out bugs or responsiveness issues. I didn't get specific accessibility warnings, so nothing major stood out to them.

Overall Site

Overall, visitors rated the site really highly and said it looked good and was easy to use. They especially loved how interactive it was and how clean the visuals were. The main suggestions were to fix the footer font size and maybe add more plant species and seasonal info.

Action Plan

Based on their feedback, I'm planning to shrink the footer font so it fits better with the rest of the page, and I'll add more plant types along with the seasons they grow best in. Both changes should make the site feel a little more polished and helpful.